BRADY ESTATE GOES TO JESUITS

A Papal Duchess sells her Treasures for her Church

last February, Mrs. Genevieve Garvan Brady announced that she was turning "Inisfada," her great Long Island estate, over to the Church she serves sp well. A devout Roman Catholic, Mrs. Brady was giving Inisfada to the Society of Jesus to be used as a seminary. Mrs. Brady would no longer need Inisfada. For a twofold reason, she was going to live in Rome. There she would be near the Vatican, where her heart has more and more turned. There also she would be the wife of William J. Babington Macaulay. State Minister to the Vatican. In March, Mrs. Brady became Mrs. Macaulay. She was in her Roman villa last week while thousands of strangers rounced over Inistata, came delightedly upon its little shrine (inset above), crowded into its 87 rooms to buy its $600,000 worth of furnishings. First four days of the auction netted $134,000.

The late Nicholas Frederic Brady, as devont as his wife, could have wished no better end for Inisfada. In 1936, the Brady's were made Papal Duke and Duchess. Since Mr. Brady's death in 1930. Mrs. Brady has given generously to the Church of the $50,000,000 utilities fortune her husband left. The Church has been grateful. Cardinal Bonzano came to dedicate Inisfada and its private chapel (right). Notre Dame has awarded Mrs. Brady its Lactore Medal. When Papal Secretary Cardinal Posetti visited the U.S. last fall, he was the guest of the country's leading Catholic lady. He and Mrs. Brady would sit and talk of matters close to their hearts in Inisfada's Great Hall. Now this half will become a Jesuit chapel; the fine bedrooms in Inisfada, plain Jesuit cells; and the spreading acres of Inisfada will be dotted with the black-cassocked forms of grave young Jesuits.

in the Great Hall hang valuable inpestries. The one at fur and weaves the tale of the Prodigal Son. Those at side describe 15th Century court life. The rug is the one on which stood the coronation thrones of Edward VII and Alexandra.

This heavy Georgian table has a mosaic top made in Roman times. It shows a bird in a chariot, driving two wild animals. The front support is a great gilded eagle. Notice, in back, the finely fluted Ionic pilasters in the wall paneling.

This master's bedroom had a Spanish Renaissance bed, with forged iron bedposts to hold up the blue velvet canopy. On the far side is a pric-dieu. Like all other Inisfada bedrooms, this will be divided up into small plain Jesuit cells.

The gold-plated fixtures in Mrs. Brady's bathroom (above) are duplicated in two other bathrooms. All three sets will be removed for sale.

Not for sale are Inisfada's two big oil-burning furnaces (above). Such huge furnaces are needed to warm a house so capacious that at one time it seated and served 85 guests at dinner. The furnaces will remain to heat the Jesuit seminary.
